

Ambassadors

Evangelina S.

How did you find out about this opportunity?

Social media! Ambassadors are made up of all different kinds of students and a lot of Ambassadors repost Instagram posts that announce hiring dates; the Ambassador website also lists the dates and has a link to the application [Contact: Stephanie Iacoviello, iacovies@tcnj.edu]

What has your experience been like?

At first, I was super nervous because I had heard so much about the importance of being an Ambassador, but with training orientations, I was able to get to know the other new hires and go through the learning process together. As we began to build our knowledge of the ins and outs of campus, the older members of the program were super helpful in sharing advice and giving guidance. Being able to actually be in action, working with other Ambassadors and prospective families is an eye-opening experience that I have truly begun to cherish and look forward to. The people are definitely what makes the experience special for me!

What should a student know about this opportunity?

This is really an opportunity to put yourself out there; you will get the chance to learn a lot about TCNJ and different programs; my favorite part of being an Ambassador is talking to prospective students and families, you grow in your interpersonal communication skills and learn how to put yourself in other people's shoes; overall you're widening your horizons within the TCNJ community along with future lions

Why should ROSCOE students be interested in this?

I am very passionate about my specific academic program and have been involved in major specific organizations, but being an Ambassador has introduced me to so many other students that I might've never crossed paths with if I didn't put myself out there. I love getting to know other people and hearing why they chose their major and what they hope to do in the future.
